THE MENAECHMI: THE ORIGINAL OF SHAKESPEARE'S "COMEDY OF ERRORS": THE LATIN TEXT TOGETHER WITH THE ELIZABETHAN TRANSLATION: EDITED BY W. H. D. ROUSE, LITT.D.
INTRODUCTION

Sources of the Menæchmi. The Latin play was taken from a Greek original, as the custom was, and as we are told in the prologue. Nothing is known of this original. Because the Menæchmi came from Sicily, Epicharmus has been guessed as the author; but there is no ground for this, since the art of Epicharmus seems to have been nearer to buffoonery than to comedy, and this play breathes the very air of the New Comedy. What the prologue says about the Sicilissare of his author, is shown by the context to refer to the scene, not the dialect. The title Δίδυμοι, or Δίδυμαι, "Twins," is known amongst the plays of Alexis, Anaxandrides, Antiphanes, Aristophon, Euphron, Menander, and Xenarchus. An attempt has been made to show that Poseidippos (who also wrote a Δίδυμοι) was the author, because Cylindrus here is Erotium’s slave or servant, and Athenæus says that Poseidippos alone brings in a slave as cook. This is probably not true, and if it were, it is not certain that Cylindrus here is a slave. It remains then to say that any of the poets above named may have been the author, or some one else.
Translations. The Menechmi was acted in Italian at Ferrara, A.D. 1486 (Ruth, Gesch. der it. Poesie, ii. 115), and again in 1501 apparently at Milan (Burchardt, * Cultur der Ren.*, 319). It was also drawn upon by Cardinal Bernard Dovitius for his Calandria, and by Cecchi for his Moglie. The plays of J. G. Trissino, I Simillimi (Venice, 1547), and of Agnolo Firenzuola, I Lucidi (Florence, 1549), were also founded upon it. The Spaniard Juan de Timoneda published a version in 1559. Other adaptations exist in French and German, before Shakespeare. After the time of Shakespeare we have Rotrou’s Les Ménechmes acted in 1632 and Regnard’s in 1705, Boursault’s Les Menteurs qui ne mentent pas, Cailhava’s Les Ménechmes grecs, and Goldoni’s I Due Gemelli Veneziani. Further information may be got in Dunlop’s History of Roman Literature, 185 ff., Teuffel’s Hist., i. 137, and Ward’s English Dramatic Literature, i. 373, with the prefaces of Wagner and Ussing to their editions of the Latin play, and that of Prof. Gollancz to the Comedy of Errors (Temple Shakespeare); cp. also Menechmi und Amphitruo im englischen drama bis zur 1661, by Karl Roeder (Leipzig, 1904).

In English. The episode of Jack Juggler (1563) is probably the first representation in English of the favourite "farce of mistaken identity." The oldest English translation, which is here reprinted, was by William Warner, and published in 1595; he tells us, however, that it had circulated in MS. before. Shakespeare may have seen it; but on the other hand, as the Comedy of Errors may be fairly dated 1589-91, Warner may have seen Shakespeare. The only verbal echo is found in the Comedy of Errors, ii. 1. 100, where Adriana says "poor I am but his stale"; in our translation the Wife says "He makes me a stale and a laughing-stock to all the world."

Comparison of the Latin with the Translation.

Warner's translation is largely a free paraphrase; he frequently compresses the original, omitting lines or whole speeches, or giving a pithy summary of the cantica or lyric parts of the Latin. Occasionally a short speech has been interjected with good effect: instances will be pointed out in the notes. It is clear that Warner wrote with an eye on the stage, and his brisk interchange has often the advantage over Plautus.

Comparison of the Latin with Shakespeare.

Shakespeare has made the play far more complex by the addition of new characters, Ægeon, Balthazar, Angelo, the Abbess, Luciana, and especially the second Dromio. He has also given a touch of suspense and pathos to the play by the episode of Ægeon, his plain unvarnished tale, and the risk of death. This is one of his characteristic touches, the comedy which is almost a tragedy, of which Much Ado About Nothing is one example, and the Merchant of Venice another: the last, indeed, really includes a tragedy, whether Shakespeare felt it or not. But the great triumph of the Comedy of Errors is the creation of the two Dromios. This can hardly be said to make the plot more unlikely. The plot anyhow is impossible; and if for fun we allow the convention of two twins exactly alike in person and dress, let us by all means allow a second pair, and make our fun threefold. The existence of the twin Dromios makes it possible to begin the confusion early, and to keep it up with continual variations as long as the play lasts. In the Latin there is no confusion before II. ii., when Cylindrus meets Menæchmus Traveller and his man; Erotium meets them in the next scene, and in the third act Peniculus and the maid are confronted with them.
INTRODUCTION

The fourth act works off the result of this confusion on Menæchmus Citizen, and in V. i.–iii. the Traveller meets the wife and the father-in-law of the Citizen. The Citizen then comes in for the effects of these meetings, and finally the twins meet in the last scene.

Shakespeare, however, is able to begin the fun earlier.
His scenes, counted as the Latin, are three in Act I., five in Act II., five in Act III., seventeen in Act IV., and eight in Act V. In the third of these (I. ii.) he brings in the first confusion, when Antipholus the Traveller (if I may use the same title) meets Dromio the Citizen’s man. After an interval, while this begins to work on the Citizen, the same two meet again, and are next confronted with the Citizen’s wife and her sister.—The third act opens with a scene in which recognition is near, Antipholus the Citizen and his Dromio trying to get into their own house, where the two doubles already are. Then comes a meeting of the sister with the two Travellers, which makes the confusion worse. The first scene of IV. is made brisk by a confusion of the two Dromios, who enter one after the other to Antipholus the Citizen. In the following scenes we have further meetings between the Travellers and Adriana, Luciana, and the Courtezan, and between the Citizens and the same, the puzzlement increasing when one pair goes out and the other immediately comes in. Finally, the plot works up to its climax and the two pairs meet: Ægeon is delivered from death, and finds his wife in the Abbess.

The complexity of Shakespeare’s plot is not realized until the two plays have been analyzed. The analysis of the Menachmi discloses that Menæchmus the Citizen does not meet any strangers until the last scene, when he is confronted with his double. Menæchmus the Traveller has seven such meetings (counting each of the important characters as one); the Wife, the Father, and Messenio have two each; Peniculus, Erotium, Cylindrus, and the maid one each. On the other hand: in Shakespeare Antipholus the Citizen has three such meetings, Antipholus the Traveller twelve; Dromio the Citizen's man has four, and the other Dromio eleven (counting the house scene as one); Adriana the Wife has seven; her sister Luciana eight; the Courtezan four; and Luce one. The proportion of Shakespeare to Plautus is 50 : 17, or nearly three to one. This was made possible by the invention of the second Dromio.
THE PRINTER TO THE READERS.

The writer hereof, loving Readers, having divers of this Poet's Comedies Englished, for the use and delight of his private friends, who in Plautus' own words are not able to understand them; I have prevailed so far with him as to let this one go farther abroad, for a public recreation and delight to all those that affect the diverse sorts of books compiled in this kind, whereof (in my judgement) in harmless mirth and quickness of fine conceit, the most of them come far short of this. And although I found him very loath and unwilling to hazard this to the curious view of envious detraction, being, as he tells me, neither so exactly written, as it may carry any name of a Translation, nor such liberty therein used, as that he would notoriously vary from the Poet's own order; yet sith it is only a matter of merriment, and the little alteration thereof can breed no detriment of importance, I have over-ruled him so far as to let this be offered to your courteous acceptance, and if you shall applaud his little labour herein, I doubt not but he will endeavour to gratify you with some of the rest, better laboured and more curiously polished.

Farewell.

* Where you find this mark, the Poet's conceit is somewhat altered, by occasion either of the time, the country, or the phrase.
ARGVMENTVM

Mercator Siculus, quoi erant gemini filii,
Ei surrumpo altero mors optigit.
Nomen surreptici illi indit qui domist
Avos paternus, facit Menaechmum e Sosicle.
Et is germanum, postquam adolevit, quaeritat
Circum omnis oras. post Epidamnum devenit:
Hic fuerat alitus ille surrepticius.
Menaechmum omnes civem credunt advenam
Eumque appellant meretrix, uxor et socer.
I se cognoscunt fratres postremo invicem.
THE ARGUMENT

* Two twinborn sons, a Sicil merchant had,
Menechmus one, and Sosicles the other:
The first his father lost a little lad,
The Grandsire named the latter like his brother.
This, grown a man, long travel took to seek
His brother, and to Epidamnum came,
Where th'other dwelt enrich'd, and him so like,
That citizens there take him for the same:
Father, wife, neighbours, each mistaking either,
Much pleasant error, ere they meet together.

PROLOGUE

[BY A LATER HAND]

Good health first of all I wish to us all here present at this play. I bring you Plautus, not on the hand but on the tongue: whom I beg you to receive with gracious attention. Now hear the plot, and give careful ear, which I will set forth as briefly as I may. Note a habit of the poets in their comedies: they place the scene of all their events in Athens, to make you think it all the more truly Greek: I will never say so when it is the fact. Greek this story is indeed, but not Attic; it is Sicilian. So much by way of preface to my plot; and now for the plot itself, measured not by the bushel or the peck but by the whole barn: see how generous is my measure in telling this tale.

There was a merchant at Syracuse, an old man, who had two twin sons, boys so much alike that the nurse who fostered them could not tell which was which, nay not their own mother who bore them: at least so I have been told by one who saw them. I have not seen them myself, pray do not postquam iam pueri septuennes sunt, pater onerauit nauim magnam multis mercibus; imponit geminum álterum in nauim pater, Tarentum auexit secum ad mercatum simul, illum reliquit alterum apud matrem domi. Tarenti ludei forte erant quom illuc uenit. mortales multi, ut ad ludos, conuenerant: puer aberrauit inter homines a patre. Epidamniensis quidam ibi mercator fuit, is puerum tollit auchitque Epidamnium. pater eius autem postquam puerum perdidit, animum despondit eaque is aegritudine paucis diebus post Tarenti emortuost. postquam Syracúsas de ea re rediit nuntius ad auom puerorum, puerum surruptum alterum patremque pueri Tarenti | esse emortuom, immutat nomen auos hu'i'c gemino alteri; ita illúm dilexit qui surruptust alterum: illius nomen indit illi qui domi est, Menaechmo, idem quod alteri nomen fuit; et ipsus eodem est auo' uocatus nomine (propterea illius nomen memini facilius, quia illúm clamore uidi flagitarier) ne mox erretis, iam nunc praedico prius: idem est ambobus nomen geminis fratribus. nunc in Epidamnum pedibus redeundum est mihi, ut hanc rem uobis examussim disputem.
think so. When the boys were seven years old, the father freighted a large ship with merchandise; one of the twins he took aboard and sailed away with him to Sicily on trading bent; the other he left at home with the mother. When he came to Tarentum, it happened that there were games afoot: a crowd of visitors, as usual when there are games; the boy went astray from his father among the crowd. A merchant of Epidamnum who happened to be there, carried off the boy to Epidamnum. The boy thus gone, his father lost heart, and before many days had past he died of that distress at Tarentum. Now when the news came to the child’s grandfather at Syracuse, that one of the twins had been lost and the father was dead in Tarentum, the grandfather changed the name of the other twin, and called him by the same name as the lost one; so dearly did he love the child that was lost. Thus he gave the lost one’s name to the one that stayed at home, Menæchmus, the same name as the other had: and he goes by the same name as the grandfather (I remember his name the more easily, because I was present when he was publicly summoned by his creditors). To make all clear, I say once again, that both the twins had the same name.

Now I must post it again to Epidamnum, that I may tell you the whole tale to a T. If any of you gentlemen has any commission for Epidamnum, let him now declare it boldly, not forgetting to provide the wherewithal. Pay your money, or you'll waste your pains; but if you do pay, you'll waste more. But I return to the place I came from, and then I stand again. The Epidamnian of whom I spoke lately, the man that stole the child, had no children but only wealth: he adopts the child for his own, gives him a wife with a dower, and makes him his heir when he died. As he was going by chance into the country, after heavy rain, in fording a swift river not so very far from the city he was carried off by the stream as he had carried off the child, and there was an end of him. The lad had all his great fortune, and here he lives, the stolen twin. Now the other twin, who lives in Syracuse, has come this day to Epidamnum with his slave, to look for this twin brother of his. This is Epidamnum city while our play goes on; when another play shall be acted this stage will be another place, just as the companies of actors often change: now we have a pander living here, now a young man, now an old, the poor, the beggar, the prince, the parasite, the charlatan.

Scene I

Enter Peniculus, a Parasite.

Pen. Peniculus was given me for my name when I was young, because like a broom I swept all clean away, where-soe'er I become—namely, all the victuals which are set before me. Now in my judgement, men that clap iron bolts on such captives (as they would keep safe), and tie those servants in chains, who they think will run away, they commit an exceeding great folly: my reason is, these poor wretches, enduring one misery upon another, never cease devising how by wrenching asunder their gyves, or by some subtilty or other, they may escape such cursed bands. If then ye would keep a man without all suspicion of running away from ye, the surest way is to tie him with meat, drink, and ease: let him ever be idle, eat his belly full, and carouse while his skin will hold, and he shall never, I warrant ye, stir a foot. These strings to tie one by the teeth, pass all the bands of iron, steel, or what metal soever, for the more slack and easy ye make them, the faster still they tie the party which is in them. I speak this upon experience of myself, who am because I have lately been a stranger there, I mean to visit him at dinner: for my stomach methinks even thrusts me into the fetters of his dainty fare. But yonder I see his [25

Pen. [aside] Yea, marry, now comes he to the point that pricks me; this last speech galls me as much as it would do his wife. If he dine not at home, I am dressed.

Men. Cit. We that have loves abroad and wives at home, are miserably hampered, yet would every man could tame his shrew as well as I do mine. I have now filched away a fine riding cloak of my wife's, which I mean to bestow upon one that I love better. Nay, if she be so wary and watchful over me, I count it an alms-deed to deceive her.

Pen. [coming forward] Come, what share have I in that same?

Men. Cit. Out, alas, I am taken!
Pen. True, but by your friend.

Men. Cit. What, mine own Peniculus?

Er. hodie id siet. Men. in eo uterque proelio potentium; uter ibi melior bellator erit inuentus cantharo,

Er. hodie id siet.

Men. sustine hoc est? Men. induuias tuae atque uxorui exuiias, rosa.

Er. superas facile ut superior sis mihi quam quisquam qui impertant.

Pe. meretrix tantisper blanditut, dum illud quod rapiat uidet; nam si amabas, iam oportetab nassum abreptum mordicus.

Men. sustine hoc, Penicule: exuuias facere quas uoui uolo.

Pe. cedo; sed opsecro hercle, salta sic cum palla postea.

Men. ego saltabo? sanus hercle non es. Pe. egone an tu magis?
THE SWEETHEART

not be too rash. Oh, see, she is in good time coming forth.

Pen. Ah, he now looks against the sun, how her beams dazzle his eyes!

Scene III

Enter Erotium.

Erot. What, mine own Menechmus! Welcome, sweetheart.

Pen. And what am I, welcome too?

Erot. You, sir? ye are out of the number of my welcome guests.

*Pen. I am like a voluntary soldier, out of pay.

Men. Cit. Erotium, I have determined that here shall be pitched a field this day; we mean to drink for the heavens: and which of us performs the bravest service at his weapon the wine bowl, yourself as captain shall pay him his wages according to his deserts.

Erot. Agreed.

Pen. I would we had the weapons, for my valour pricks me to the battle.

Men. Cit. Shall I tell thee, sweet mouse? I never look upon thee, but I am quite out of love with my wife.

Erot. Yet ye cannot choose, but ye must still wear something of hers: what's this same?

Men. Cit. This? such a spoil, sweetheart, as I took from her to put on thee.

Erot. Mine own Menechmus, well worthy to be my dear, of all dearest.
si non saltas, exue igitur. Men. nimio ego hanc periculo surrupui hodie. meo quidem animo ab Hippolyta subcingulum haud

Hercules aeque magno umquam ápstulit periculo.
cape tibi hanc, quando una uius meis morigera moribus.
Er. hoc animo decet animatos esse amatores probos. 20
Pe. qui quidem ad mendicitatem se proferent detrudere.
Men. quattuor minis ego emi istanc anno uxorí meae.
Pe. quattuor minae perierunt plane, ut ratio redditur.

iám hic nos erimus: dum coquetur, interim potabimus.
sequere tú.—Pe. ego hercle uero te et seruabo et te sequar, neque hodie ut te perdam meream deorum diuitias mihi.— Er. euocate intus Culindrum mihi coquom actutum foras. 35
THE SPOILS

Pen. [aside] Now she shows herself in her likeness, when she finds him in the giving vein, she draws close to him.

Men. Cit. I think Hercules got not the garter from Hippolyta so hardly, as I got this from my wife. Take this, and with the same, take my heart.

Pen. Thus they must do that are right lovers; especially if they mean to [be] beggars with any speed.

Men. Cit. I bought this same of late for my wife; it stood me, I think, in some ten pound.

Pen. There's ten pound bestowed very thrifty.

Men. Cit. But know ye what I would have ye do?

Erot. It shall be done; your dinner shall be ready.

*Men. Cit. Let a good dinner be made for us three. Hark ye, some oysters, a mary-bone pie or two, some artichoks, and potato roots; let our other dishes be as you please.

Erot. You shall, Sir.

Men. Cit. I have a little business in this city; by that time dinner will be prepared. Farewell till then, sweet Erotium: Come, Peniculus.

Pen. Nay, I mean to follow ye: I will sooner lese my life than sight of you till this dinner be done.

Exeunt [Pen. and Men. Cit.]

Erot. Who's there? Call me Cylindrus the cook hither.
CYLINDRUS COQUOS

Scaena IV

Erotivm. Cylindrus.

Er. Sportulum cape atque argentum. eccos tris nummos habes.

Cy. habeo. Er. abi atque opsonium adfer; 'tribu' uide quod sit satis: neque desiat neque supersit. Cy. quoismodi hic homines erunt?

Er. ego et Menaechmus et parasitus eiius. Cy. iam isti sunt decem; nam parasitus octo | hominum munus facile fungitur.

5 Er. elocuta sum conuiuas, ceterum cura. Cy. licet. cocta sunt, iube ire accubitum. Er. redi cito. Cy. iam ego hic ero.—

Scaena I

Menaechmvs II. Messenio.

Men. Voluptas nullast nauitis, Messenio, maior meo animo quam quam éx alto procul terram conspiciunt. Mes. maior, non dicam dolo, quasi aduéniens terram uides quae fuerit tua. sed quaesso, quámobrem nunc Epidamnum uenimus? an quasi mare omnis circumimus insulas?
Scene IV.

[Enter Cylindrus.] Cylindrus, take this hand-basket, and here, there's ten shillings, is there not?

Cyl. 'Tis so, mistress.

Erot. Buy me of all the daintiest meats ye can get; ye know what I mean: so as three may dine passing well, and yet no more than enough.

Cyl. What guests have ye to-day, mistress?

Erot. Here will be Menechmus and his Parasite, and myself.

Cyl. That's ten persons in all.

Erot. How many?

Cyl. Ten, for I warrant you that Parasite may stand for eight at his victuals.

Erot. Go, despatch as I bid you, and look ye return with all speed.

Cyl. I will have all ready with a trice.

Exeunt.

ACT II
Scene I

Enter Menechmus Sosicles [the Traveller], Messenio his servant, and some Sailors.

Men. Tra. Surely, Messenio, I think seafarers never take so comfortable a joy in anything, as when they have been long tossed and turmoiled in the wide seas, they hap at last to ken land.

Mess. I'll be sworn I should not be gladder to see a whole country of mine own, than I have been at such a sight. But I pray, wherefore are we now come to Epidamnum? Must we needs go to see every town that we hear of?

Men. Tra. Till I find my brother, all towns are alike to me: I must try in all places.

Mess. Why then, let's even as long as we live, seek your brother: six years now have we roamed about thus, Istria, Hispania, Massilia, Illyria, all the upper sea, all high Greece, all haven towns in Italy. I think if we had sought a needle all this time, we must needs have found it, had it been above ground. It cannot be that he is alive; and to seek a dead man thus among the living, what folly is it!

Men. Tra. Yea, could I but once find any man that could certainly inform me of his death, I were satisfied; otherwise I can never desist seeking. Little knowest thou, Messenio, how near my heart it goes.

Mess. This is washing of a blackamoor. Faith, let's go home, unless ye mean we should write a story of our travel.

Men. Tra. Sirra, no more of these saucy speeches; I perceive I must teach ye how to serve me, not to rule me.

Mess. Ay, so, now it appears what it is to be a servant. Well, yet I must speak my conscience. Do ye hear, sir? Faith, I must tell ye one thing, when I look into the lean estate of your purse, and consider advisedly of your decaying stock, I hold it very needful to be drawing homeward, lest in looking [for] your brother, we quite lose ourselves. For this assure yourself, this town Epidamnum, is a place of outrageous expenses, exceeding in all riot and lasciviousness: and, I uoluptārii atque potatores maxumei; tum sycophantae et palpatores plurumei in urbe hac habitant; tum meretrices mulieres nusquam perhibentur blandiores gentium.
propterea huic urbei nomen Epidamno inditumst, quia nemo ferme huc sine damno deuortitur.

Men. ego istūc cauebo. cedodum huc mihi marsuppium.
Mes. quid eo ueis? Men. iam aps te metuo de uerbis tuis.
Mes. quid metuis? Men. ne mihi damnum in Epidamno

Scaena II

CylindrVS. MenaeclmVS II. Messenio.

Cy. Bene opsonaui atque ex mea sententia, bonum anteponam prandium pransoribus.
sed eccūm Menaechmum uideo. uae tergo meo!
prius iam conuiuae ambulant ante ostium quam ego opsonatu redeo. adibo atque adloquar.
Menaechme, salue. Men. di te amabunt quisquis (es).
Cy. quisquis * * * (quis) ego sim?
Men. non hercle uero. Cy. úbi conuiuae ceteri?
MY PURSE

hear, as full of ribalds, parasites, drunkards, catchpoles, cony-catchers, and sycophants, as it can hold. Then for courtesans, why here’s the currentest stamp of them in the world. Ye must not think here to scape with as light cost as in other places. The very name shews the nature, no man comes hither sine damno.

Men. Tra. Ye say very well indeed: give me my purse into mine own keeping, because I will so be the safer, sine damno.

Mess. Why, sir?

Men. Tra. Because I fear you will be busy among the courtesans, and so be cozened of it: then should I take great pains in belabouring your shoulders. So to avoid both these harms, I’ll keep it myself.

Mess. I pray do so, sir; all the better.

Scene II

Enter Cylindrus.

*Cyl. I have tickling gear here i’ th’ faith for their dinners. It grieves me to the heart to think how that cormorant knave Peniculus must have his share in these dainty morsels. But what? Is Menechmus come already, before I could come from the market? Menechmus, how do ye, sir? How haps it ye come so soon?

Men. Tra. God a mercy, my good friend, dost thou know me?

Cyl. Know ye? no, not I. Where’s mouldychaps that must dine with ye? A murrain on his manners.
QUIS EST?

Men. quos tu conuiuas quaeris? Cy. parasitum tuom.
Men. meum parasitum? Cy. certe hic insanust homo. 10
Mes. dixin tibi esse hic sycophantas plurumos?

Men. quem tu parasitum quaeris, adulescens, meum?
Cy. Menaechme, numero huc aduenis ad prandium.
nunc opsonatu redeo. Men. responde mihi, 15 adulescens: quibus hic pretieis porci ueneunt sacres sinceri? Cy. nummeis. Men. nummum a me accipe:
iube té piari de mea pecunia.
nam équidem | insanum esse te certo scio, qui mihi molestu’s homini ignoto quisquis es. 20
Cy. Cylindrus ego sum: non nosti nomen meum?
Men. sei tu Cylindrus seu Coriendru’s, perieris.
ego te non noui neque nouisse adeo uolo.
Cy. est tibi Menaechmo nomen. Men. tantum quod sciam,

Men. nego hercle uero. Cy. non tu in illisce aedibus Men. Tra. Whom meanest thou, good fellow?

Cyl. Why Peniculus' worship, that whorson lick-trencher, your parasitical attendant.

Mess. [to Men. Tra.] Did I not tell ye what cony-catching villains you should find here?

Cyl. Menechmus, hark ye, sir, ye come too soon back again to dinner; I am but returned from the market.

Men. Tra. Fellow, here, thou shalt have money of me, go get the priest to sacrifice for thee. I know thou art mad, else thou wouldst never use a stranger thus.

Cyl. Alas, sir, Cylindrus was wont to be no stranger to you. Know ye not Cylindrus?

Men. Tra. Cylindrus, or Coliendrus, or what the devil thou art, I know not, neither do I care to know.

Cyl. I know you to be Menechmus.

Men. Tra. Thou shouldst be in thy wits, in that thou namest me so right; but tell me, where hast thou known me?

Cyl. Where? Even here, where ye first fell in love with my mistress Erotium.

Men. Tra. I neither have lover, neither know I who thou art.

Cyl. Know ye not who I am, who fills your cup and dresses your meat at our house?

Mess. What a slave is this! that I had somewhat to break the rascal's pate withal.

Men. Tra. At your house, when as I never came in Epidamnum till this day?

Cyl. Oh, that's true! Do ye not dwell in yonder house?
hahas? Men. di illos homines qui illi[c] habitant perduint!
Cy. insanit hicquidem, qui ipse male dicit sibi.

CROSS PURPOSES

Men. Tra. Foul shame light upon them that dwell there, for my part.

Cyl. Questionless, he is mad indeed, to curse himself thus. Hark ye, Menechmus!

Men. Tra. What say'st thou?

Cyl. If I may advise ye, ye shall bestow this money which ye offered me, upon a sacrifice for yourself; for out of doubt you are mad, that curse yourself.

Mess. What a varlet art thou to trouble us thus!

Cyl. Tush, he will many times jest with me thus. Yet when his wife is not by, 'tis a ridiculous jest.

Men. Tra. What's that?

Cyl. This I say. Think ye I have brought meat enough for three of you? If not, I'll fetch more for you and your wench, and Snatchcrust, your Parasite.

Men. Tra. What wenches? What Parasites?

Mess. Villain, I'll make thee tell me what thou meanest by all this talk.

Cyl. [to Mess.] Away, Jack Napes; I say nothing to thee, for I know thee not: I speak to him that I know.

Men. Tra. Out, drunken fool, without doubt thou art out of thy wits.

Cyl. That you shall see by the dressing of your meat. Go, go, ye were better to go in and find somewhat to do there, whiles your dinner is making ready. I'll tell my mistress ye be here.

[Exit.] 65

Mess. Tush, mark, I pray. I'll lay forty pound here dwells some courtesan to whom this fellow belongs.

rogitant qui oiaatis sit, quid ei nomen siet postilla extemplo se adplicant, adglutinant:
si pellexerunt, perditum amittunt domum.
nunc in istoc portu stat nauis praedatoria, aps qua cauendum nobis sane censeo.

Men. mones quidem hercle recte. Mes. tum demum sciam recte monuisse, si tu recte caueris.

Men. tacedum parumper, nam concrepuit ostium:
uideamus qui hinc egreditur. Mes. hoc ponam interim.

adseruatote haec sultis, nauales pedes.

EROTIVM.  MENAECMVSVS II.  Messenio.

Er. Sine fores sic, abi, nolo operiri.

inlecrebra animost amantium.
amanti amoenitas malost, nobis lucrost.
sed ubi ille est quem coquos ante aedis esse ait? atque eccum uideo,
Men. Tra. But I wonder how he knows my name.

Mess. Oh, I'll tell ye. These courtesans as soon as any strange ship arriveth at the Haven, they send a boy or a wench to inquire what they be, what their names be, whence they come, wherefore they come, etc. If they can by any means strike acquaintance with him, or allure him to their houses, he is their own. We are here in a tickle place, master: 'tis best to be circumspect.

Men. Tra. I mislike not thy counsel, Messenio.

Mess. Aye, but follow it then. Soft, here comes somebody forth. Here, sirs, mariners, keep this same amongst you.

[Giving luggage.]

Scene III

Enter Erotium.

Erot. Let the door stand so. Away, it shall not be shut. Make haste within there, ho! Maids, look that all things be ready. Cover the board; put fire under the perfuming pans: let all things be very handsome. Where is he that Cylindrus said stood without here? [To Men. Tra.] Oh, what mean you, sweetheart, that ye come not in? I trust you think yourself more welcome to this house than to your own, and great reason why you should do so. Your dinner and all things are ready as you willed. Will ye go sit down?

Men. Tra. Whom doth this woman speak to?

Erot. Even to you, sir. To whom else should I speak?

Men. Tra. Gentlewoman, ye are a stranger to me, and I marvel at your speeches.

Erot. Yea, sir, but such a stranger as I acknowledge ye for my best and dearest friend; and well you have deserved it.

Men. Tra. Surely, Messenio, this woman is also mad or drunk, that useth all this kindness to me upon so small acquaintance.

Mess. Tush, did not I tell ye right? these be but leaves that fall upon you now, in comparison of the trees that will tumble on your neck shortly. I told ye, here were silver-tongued hacksters. But let me talk with her a little. Gentlewoman, what acquaintance have you with this man? where have you seen him?

Erot. Where he saw me, here in Epidamnum.
Mess. In Epidamnum? who never till this day set his foot within the town?

Men. Tra. She also calls me by my name.

Mess. She smells your purse.

Men. Tra. Messenio, come hither: here, take my purse. I’ll know whether she aim at me or my purse, ere I go.

Erot. Will ye go in to dinner, sir?

Men. Tra. A good motion; yea, and thanks with all my heart.

Erot. Never thank me for that which you commanded to be provided for yourself.

Men. Tra. That I commanded?

Erot. Yea, for you and your Parasite.

Men. Tra. My Parasite?

Erot. Peniculus, who came with you this morning, when you brought me the cloak which you got from your wife.

Men. Tra. A cloak that I brought you, which I got from my wife?

Erot. Tush, what needeth all this jesting? Pray, leave off.
Er. pallam te hodie mihi dedisse uxoris. Men. etiam nunc nego.

YOU LOOK FOR ANOTHER

Men. Tra. Jest or earnest, this I tell ye for a truth. I never had wife, neither have I; nor never was in this place till this instant; for only thus far am I come, since I brake my fast in the ship.

Erot. What ship do ye tell me of?
*Mess. Marry, I’ll tell ye: an old rotten, weather-beaten ship, that we have sailed up and down in these six years. Is’t not time to be going homewards think ye?

Erot. Come, come, Menechmus, I pray leave this sporting and go in.

Men. Tra. Well, Gentlewoman, the truth is, you mistake my person: it is some other you look for.

Erot. Why, think ye I know ye not to be Menechmus, the son of Moschus, and have heard ye say, ye were born at Syracusis, where Agathocles did reign; then Pythia, then Liparo, and now Hiero.

Men. Tra. All this is true.

Mess. Either she is a witch, or else she hath dwelt there and knew ye there.

Men. Tra. [aside to Mess.] I’ll go in with her, Messenio; I’ll see further of this matter.

Mess. [to Men. Tra.] Ye are cast away then.

Men. Tra. [aside to Mess.] Why so? I warrant thee, I can lose nothing; something I shall gain; perhaps a good lodging during my abode here. I’ll dissemble with her another while. [To Erotium.] Now when you please let us go in.

I made strange with you, because of this fellow here, lest he should tell my wife of the cloak which I gave you.

Erot. Will ye stay any longer for your Peniculus, your Parasite?

Men. Tra. Not I, I'll neither stay for him, nor have him let come in, if he do come.

Erot. All the better. But, sir, will ye do one thing for me?

Men. Tra. What is that?

Erot. To bear that cloak which you gave me to the dyers, to have it new trimmed and altered.

Men. Tra. Yea, that will be well; so my wife shall not know it. Let me have it with me after dinner. I will but speak a word or two with this fellow, then I'll follow ye in. [Exit Erotium.] Ho, Messenio, come aside. Go and provide for thyself and these ship boys in some inn; then look that after dinner you come hither for me.

Mess. Ah, master, will ye be conycatched thus wilfully?

Men. Tra. Peace, foolish knave, seest thou not what a sot she is; I shall cozen her, I warrant thee mulier haec stulta atque inscita est; quantum perspexi modo, est hic praeda nobis. Mes. perii! iamne abis? periit [85 probe:]

ACT III

Scene I

Enter Peniculus.

Pen. Thirty years, I think, and more, have I played the knave, yet never played I the foolish knave as I have done this morning. I follow Menechmus, and he goes to the Hall where now the Sessions are holden; there thrusting ourselves into the press of people, when I was in midst of all the throng, he gave me the slip, that I could never more set eye on him, and I dare swear, came directly to dinner. That I would he that first devised these Sessions were hanged, and all that ever came of him, 'tis such a hindrance to men that have belly businesses in hand. If a man be not there at his call, they amerce him with a vengeance. Men that have nothing else to do, that do neither bid any man, nor are themselves bidden to dinner, such should come to Sessions, eos oportet contioni dare operam atque comitieis.
si id ita esset, non ego Hodie perdidissem prandium, quoi tam credo datum uoluísse quam me uideo uiuere.
ibo: etiamnum reliquiarum spes animum oblectat meum.

Scaena II

MENAECHMVS II. PENICVLVS.

Men. Potine ut quiescas? ego tibi hanc Hodie probe lepideque concinnatam referam temperi.
non faxo eam esse dices: ita ignorabitur.
Pe. pallam ad phrygionem fert confecto prandio uinoque expoto, parasito excluso foras.
non hercle is sum qui sum, ni | hanc iniuriam
meque ultus pulchre fuero. opserua quid dabo.
Men. pro di inmortales! quo¡ homini umquam uno die boni dedistis plus qui minu’ sperauerit?
prandi, potaui, scortum accubui, ápstuli hanc, quoiius heres numquam erit post hunc diem.
Pe. nequeo quae loquitur exaudire clanculum;
satur nunc loquitur de me et de parti mea?
Men. ait hanc dedisse me sibi atque eam meae uxori surrupuisse. quoniam sentio errare, extemplo, quasi res cum ea esset mihi, not we that have these matters to look to. If it were so, I had not thus lost my dinner this day; which I think in 15 my conscience he did even purposely cozen me of. Yet I mean to go see. If I can but light upon the reversion, I may perhaps get my penny-worths. But how now? Is this Menechmus coming away from thence? Dinner done, and all despatched? What execrable luck have I! 20

Scene II

Enter Menechmus the Traveller.

Men. Tra. [to Erotium within] Tush, I warrant ye, it shall be done as ye would wish. I'll have it so altered and trimmed anew, that it shall by no means be known again.

Pen. [aside] He carries the cloak to the dyers, dinner done, the wine drunk up, the Parasite shut out of doors. 5
Well, let me live no longer, but I'll revenge this injurious mockery. But first I'll hearken awhile what he saith.

Men. Tra. Good gods, who ever had such luck as I!
Such cheer, such a dinner, such kind entertainment! And for a farewell, this cloak which I mean shall go with me. 10

Pen. [aside] He speaks so softly, I cannot hear what he saith. I am sure he is now flouting at me for the loss of my dinner.

Men. Tra. She tells me how I gave it her, and stole it from my wife. When I perceived she was in an error 15
 ETIAM DERIDES

coeipi adsentari: mulier quidquid dixerat, idem ego dicebam. quid multis uerbis (opust)?
minore nusquam bene fui dispendor.

Pe. adibo ad hominem, nam turbare gestio.

Men. quis hic est qui aduorsus it mihi? Pe. quid ais, homo leuior quam pluma, pessume et nequissume, flagitium hominis, subdole ac minimi preti?
quid de te merui qua me caussa perderes?
ut surrupuisti te mihi dudum de foro!

fecisti funus med apsenti prandio.

quur ausu's facere, quoii ego aeque heres eram?

Men. adulescens, quaeso, quid tibi mecum est rei
qui mihi male dicas homini ignoto | insciens?
an tibi malam rem uis pro male dictis dari?

Pe. post eam quam edepol te dedisse intellego.

Men. respondes, adulescens, quaeo, quid nomen tibist?

Pe. etiam derides quasi nomen non gnoveris?

Men. non edepol ego te quod sciam umquam ante hunc diem uidi neque gnoui; uerum certo, quisquis es, si aequom facias, mihi odiosus ne sies.

Pe. Menaechme, uigila. Men. uigilo hercle equidem quod sciam.

Pe. non me nouisti? Men. non negem si nouerim.

Pe. tuom parasitum non nouisti? Men. non tibi sanum est, adulescens, sinciput, intellego.

Pe. respondes, surrupuistin uxori tuae
pallam istanc hodie | ac dedisti Erotio?
tho' I knew not how, I began to soothe her, and to say everything as she said. Meanwhile, I fared well, and that o' free cost.

Pen. Well, I'll go talk with him. [Coming forward.]

Men. Tra. Who is this same that comes to me?

Pen. Oh, well met, fickle-brain, false and treacherous dealer, crafty and unjust promise-breaker. How have I deserved, you should so give me the slip, come before, and despatch the dinner, deal so badly with him that hath reverenced ye like a son?

Men. Tra. Good fellow, what meanest thou by these speeches? Rail not on me, unless thou intend'st to receive a railer's hire.

Pen. I have received the injury, sure I am, already.

Men. Tra. Prithee tell me, what is thy name?

Pen. Well, well, mock on, sir, mock on: do ye not know my name?

Men. Tra. In troth I never saw thee in all my life; much less do I know thee.

Pen. Fie! awake, Menechmus, awake; ye oversleep yourself!

Men. Tra. I am awake: I know what I say.

Pen. Know you not Peniculus?

Men. Tra. Peniculus, or Pediculus, I know thee not.

Pen. Did ye filch a cloak from your wife this morning, and bring it hither to Erotium?
UXORI ELOQUAR

Men. neque hercle ego uxorem habeo neque ego Erotio dedi nec pallam surrupui. Pe. satin sanus es?
occisast haec res. non ego te indutum foras exeire uidi pallam? Men. uae capiti tuo!
onmis cinaedos esse censes quia tu es?
tun med indutum fuisse pallam praedicatas?
Pe. ego hercle uero. Men. non tu abis quo dignus es?
aut te piari iube, homo insanissume.
Pe. numquam edepol quisquam me exorabit quin tuae uxori rem omnem iám, uti sit gesta, eloquar;
omnes in té istaec recident contumeliae:
faxo haud inultus prandium comederis.—
Men. quid hoc ést negoti? satine, uti quemque conspicor, ita me ludificant? sed concrepuit ostium.

Scaena III

Ancilla. Menaechmus II.

An. Menaechme, amare ait te multum Erotium, †ut hoc una opera ad auruficem deferas, †
atque hoc ut addas auri pondo | unciam iubeasque spinter nouom reconcinnarier.
Men. et istúc et aliud si quid curari uolet me curaturum dicitò, quidquid uolet.
An. scin quid hoc sit spinter? Men. nescic nisi aureum.
An. hoc est quod olim clanculum ex armario te surrupuisse aiebas uxori tuae.
Men. Tra. Neither have I wife, neither gave I my cloak to Erotium, neither filched I any from anybody.
Pen. Will ye deny that which you did in my company?
Men. Tra. Wilt thou say I have done this in thy company? 45
Pen. Will I say it? yea, I will stand to it.
Men. Tra. Away, filthy mad drivel, away; I will talk no longer with thee.
Pen. Not a world of men shall stay me, but I'll go tell his wife of all the whole matter, sith he is at this point with me. I will make this same as unblest a dinner as ever he eat.
[Exit.]
Men. Tra. It makes me wonder, to see how everyone that meets me cavils thus with me. Wherefore comes forth the maid now?

Scene III

Enter Ancilla, Erotium's maid.

Anc. Menechmus, my mistress commends her heartily to you, and seeing you go that way to the dyer's, she also desireth you to take this chain with you, and put it to mending at the goldsmith's; she would have two or three ounces of gold more in it, and the fashion amended.
Men. Tra. Either this or anything else within my power, tell her, I am ready to accomplish.
Anc. Do ye know this chain, sir?
Men. Tra. Yea, I know it to be gold.
Anc. This is the same you once took out of your wife's casket.
Men. numquam hercle factum est. An. non meministi, opsecro?

redde igitur spinter, si non meministi. Men. mane.

immo equidem memini. nempe hoc est quod illi dedei.

istuc: ubi illae ármillae sunt quas una dedei?

et palla et spinter faxo referantur simul.

An. amabo, mi Menaechme, inauris da mihi faciendas pondo duom nummmum, stalagnia, ut te lubenteruideam, quom ad nos ueneris.

Men. fiat. cedo aurum; ego manupretium dabo.

An. da sodes aps te; poste reddidero tibi.

Men. immo cedo aps te: ego post tibi reddam duplex.

An. non habeo. Men. át tu, quando habebis, tum dato.

An. numquid [me] uis?—Men. haec me curaturum dico—ut quantum possint quique liceant ueneant.

iamne introabiit? abiiit, operuit fores.

di me quidem omnes adiuuuant, augent, amant.

sed quid ego cesso, dum datur mi occasio tempusque, abire ab his locis lenonieis?

propera, Menaechme, fer pedem, confer gradum.

demam hanc coronam atque abiciam ad laeuam manum, ut, si [quis] sequantur me, hac abisse censeant.

ibo et conueniam seruom si potero meum, ut haec, quae bona dant di mihi, | ex me sciat.—
ANOTHER COMMISSION

Men. Tra. Who, did I?
Anc. Have you forgotten?
Men. Tra. I never did it.
Anc. Give it me again then.
Men. Tra. Tarry: yes, I remember it; ’tis it I gave your mistress.

Anc. Oh, are you advised?
Men. Tra. Where are the bracelets that I gave her likewise?

Anc. I never knew of any.
Men. Tra. Faith, when I gave this, I gave them too.
Anc. Well, sir, I’ll tell her this shall be done?

Men. Tra. Ay, ay, tell her so; she shall have the cloak and this both together.

Anc. I pray, Menechmus, put a little jewel for my ear to making for me: ye know I am always ready to pleasure you.

Men. Tra. I will, give me the gold; I’ll pay for the workmanship.

Anc. Lay out for me; I’ll pay it ye again.

Men. Tra. Alas, I have none now.

Anc. When you have, will ye?

Men. Tra. I will. Go bid your mistress make no doubt of these. I warrant her, I’ll make the best hand I can of them. [Exit Ancilla.] Is she gone? Do not all the gods conspire to load me with good luck? well I see ’tis high time to get me out of these coasts, lest all these matters should be lewd devices to draw me into some snare. There shall my garland lie, because if they seek me, they may think I am gone that way. *I will now go see if I can find my man Messenio, that I may tell him how I have sped.

ACT IV

Scene I

Enter Mulier, the Wife of Menechmus the Citizen, and Peniculus.

Mul. Thinks he I will be made such a sot, and to be still his drudge, while he prowls and purloins all that I have, to give his trulls?

Pen. Nay, hold your peace, we’ll catch him in the nick. This way he came, in his garland forsooth, bearing the cloak to the dyers. And see, I pray, where the garland lies; this way he is gone. See, see, where he comes again now without the cloak.

Mul. What shall I now do?

Pen. What? That which ye ever do; bait him for life. 10

Mul. Surely I think it best so.

Pen. Stay, we will stand aside a little; ye shall catch him unawares.

Scene II

Enter Menechmus the Citizen.

Men. Cit. It would make a man at his wit’s end, to see how brabbling causes are handled yonder at the Court. If a poor man never so honest have a matter come to be scanned, bonine an mali sint, id hau quierit; res magis quierit quam clientum fides quios modi clueat.
si est pauper atque hau malus nequam habetur, sin diues malust, is cliens frugi habetur.
qui nec leges neque aequom bonum usquam colunt, sollicitos patronos habent.

eis ubi dicitur dies, simul patronis dicitur, quippe qui pro illis loquimur quae male fecerunt :
aut ad populum aut in iure aut ad iudicem rest.
sicut me hodie nimi' sollicitum cliens quidam habuit neque quod uolui

apud aedilis pro eius factis plurumisque pessumisque deixeai causam, condiciones tetuli tortas, confragosas:
aut plus aut minu' quam opus erat dícto dixeram cóntrouor-siam, ut sponsio fieret. quid ill' qui praedem dedit?
nec magis manufestum ego hominem úmquam ullam teneri [25 omnibus male factis testes tres aderant acerrumi.

di illum omnes perdant, ita mihi hunc hodie corrupit diem, there is he outfaced and overlaid with countenance: if a rich man never so vile a wretch come to speak, there they are all ready to favour his cause. What with facing out bad causes for the oppressors, and patronizing some just actions for the wronged, the lawyers they pocket up all the gains. For mine own part, I come not away empty, though I have been kept long against my will: for taking in hand to despatch a matter this morning for one of my acquaintance, I was no sooner entered into it, but his adversaries laid so hard unto his charge, and brought such matter against him, that do what I could, I could not wind myself out till now. I am Pe. quid ais? Ma. uiro me malo male nuptam. Pe. satin audīs quae illic loquitur?

Ma. né illam ecastor faenerato apstulisti. Pe. sic datur.

Ma. clanculum te istaec flagitia facere censebas pote?

Men. quid illuc est, uxor, negoti? Ma. men rogas?

Men. uin hunc rogem?

Men. nil equidem paueo. Pe. nisi unum: palla pallore incutit.

sore afraid Erotium thinks much unkindness in me, [15 that I stayed so long; yet she will not be angry considering the gift I gave her to-day.

Pen. How think ye by that?

Mul. I think him a most vile wretch thus to abuse me.

Men. Cit. I will hie me thither.

Mul. Yea, go, pilferer, go with shame enough; nobody sees your lewd dealings and vile thievery.

Men. Cit. How now, wife, what ail ye? what is the matter?

Mul. Ask ye me what's the matter? Fie upon thee. 25

Pen. Are ye not in a fit of an ague, your pulses beat so sore? To him, I say!

Men. Cit. Pray, wife, why are ye so angry with me?

Mul. Oh, you know not?

Pen. He knows, but he would dissemble it.

Men. Cit. What is it?

Mul. My cloak.

Men. Cit. Your cloak?

Mul. My cloak, man; why do ye blush?

Pen. He cannot cloak his blushing. Nay, I might not go to dinner with you, do you remember? To him, I say. 36
ITERUM PALLA

Men. non taces? Pe. non hercle uero taceo. nutat ne loquar.
Men. non hercle egoquidem usquam quicquam nuto neque [50 nicto tibi.
Ma. né ego ecaster mulier misera. Men. qui tu misera es?

Pe. nihil hoc confidentius: quin quae uides ea pernegat.
Men. per Iouem deosque omnis adiuro, uxor (satin hoc est tibi?),

Men. quó ego redeam? Pe. equidem ád phrygionem [55 censeo; et pallam refer.
Men. quaé istaeec palla est? Pe. taceo iam, quando haec rem non meminit suam.
Men. tristis admodum est. non mihi istuc sati' placet— Ma.

Men. certe familiarium- aliquoi írata es. Ma. nugas agis. 60
Men. num mihi es írata saltem? Ma. nunc tu non nugas agis.
Men. non edepol deliqui quicquam. Ma. em rusum nunc nugas agis Men. dic, mea uxor, quid tibi aegre est? Pe. bellus blanditur tibi.

AGAIN THE CLOAK

Pen. Ha, hold my peace! Look ye, he beckons on me to hold my peace.
Men. Cit. I neither beckon nor wink on him. 40
Mul. Out, out, what a wretched life is this that I live.
Men. Cit. Why, what ail ye, woman?
Mul. Are ye not ashamed to deny so confidently, that which is apparent?
Men. Cit. I protest unto you before all the gods—is not this enough?—that I beckoned not on him.
Pen. Oh, sir, this is another matter: touch him in the former cause.
Men. Cit. What former cause?
Pen. The cloak, man, the cloak: fetch the cloak again from the dyers.
Men. Cit. What cloak?
Mul. Nay, I'll say no more, sith ye know nothing of your own doings.
Men. Cit. Tell me, wife, hath any of your servants abused you? Let me know.
Mul. Tush, tush.
Men. Cit. I would not have you to be thus disquieted.
Mul. Tush, tush.
Men. Cit. You are fallen out with some of your friends.
Mul. Tush, tush.
Men. Cit. Sure I am, I have not offended you.
Mul. No, you have dealt very honestly.
Men. Cit. Indeed, wife, I have deserved none of these words. Tell me, are ye not well?
Pen. What, shall he flatter ye now?
Men. Cit. I speak not to thee, knave. Good wife, come hither.
Mul. Away, away; keep your hands off.
Pe. sic datur. properato apsente me comesse prandium, post ante aedis cum corona me derideto ebrius. Men. neque edepol ego prandi neque hodie huc intro tetuli pedem.

Pe. tun negas? Men. ngeo hercle uero. Pe. nihil hoc homine audacius. non ego te modo hic ante aedis cum corona florea uidi astare? quom negabas mihi esse sanum sinciput et negabas me nouisse, peregrinum aibas esse te?

Pen. So, bid me to dinner with you again, then slip away from me; when you have done, come forth bravely in your garland, to flout me. Alas, you knew not me even now.

Men. Cit. Why, ass, I neither have yet dined, nor came I there, since we were there together.

Pen. Who ever heard one so impudent? Did ye not meet me here even now, and would make me believe I was mad, and said ye were a stranger, and ye knew me not?

Men. Cit. Of a truth, since we went together to the Sessions Hall, I never returned till this very instant, as you two met me.

Pen. Go to, go to, I know ye well enough. Did ye think I would not cry quittance with you? Yes, faith: I have told your wife all.

Men. Cit. What hast thou told her?

Pen. I cannot tell. Ask her.

Men. Cit. Tell me, wife, what hath he told ye of me? Tell me, I say; what was it?

Mul. As though you knew not my cloak is stolen from me!

Men. Cit. Is your cloak stolen from ye?

Mul. Do ye ask me?

Men. Cit. If I knew, I would not ask.

Pen. O crafty companion! how he would shift the matter? Come, come, deny it not: I tell ye. I have bewrayed all.

Men. Cit. What hast thou bewrayed?

Mul. Seeing ye will yield to nothing, be it never so manifest, hear me, and ye shall know in few words both the cause of my grief, and what he hath told me. I say my cloak is stolen from me.

Men. Cit. My cloak is stolen from me?

Pen. Look how he cavils! She saith it is stolen from her.
Men. nil mihi tecum est. sed tu quid ais? Ma. palla, inquam, perit domo.
Men. quis eam surrupuit? Ma. pol istuc ille scit qui illam apstulit.
quis is Menaechmust? Ma. tu istic, inquam. Men. egone?
Ma. tu. Men. quis arguit?
Ma. egomet. Pe. et ego. atque huic amicae detulisti [90 Erotio.
Men. egon dedi? Ma. tu tú istic, inquam. Pe. uin adferri noctuam, quae ' tu tu ' usque dicat tibi? nam nos iam defessi sumus.
Men. per Iouem deosque omnis adiuro, uxor (satin hoc est tibi?), non dedisse. Pe. immo hercle uero, nos non falsum dicere.
Men. sed ego illam non condonaui, sed sic utendam dedi. 95
Ma. equidem ecastor tuam nec chlamydem do foras nec pallium quoiquam utendum. mulierem aequom est uestimentum muliebre dare foras, uirum uirile. quin refers pallam domum?
Men. ego faxo referetur. Ma. ex re tua, ut opinor, feceris; nam domum numquam introibis nisi feres pallam simul. 100 eo domum. Pe. quid mihi futurum est qui tibi hanc operam dedi?
Ma. opera reddetur, quando quid tibi erit surruptum domo.—
Men. Cit. I have nothing to say to thee: I say, wife, tell me.

Mul. I tell ye, my cloak is stolen out of my house.

Men. Cit. Who stole it?

Mul. He knows best that carried it away.

Men. Cit. Who was that?

Mul. Menechmus.

Men. Cit. 'Twas very ill done of him. What Menechmus was that?

Mul. You.

Men. Cit. I! who will say so?

Mul. I will.

Pen. And I, that you gave it to Erotium.

Men. Cit. I gave it?

Mul. You.

Pen. You, you, you: shall we fetch a kennel of beagles that may cry nothing but you, you, you, you! For we are weary of it.

Men. Cit. Hear me one word, wife. I protest unto you by all the gods, I gave it her not: indeed I lent it her to use a while.

Mul. Faith, sir, I never give nor lend your apparel out of doors. Methinks ye might let me dispose of mine own garments as you do of yours. I pray then fetch it me home again.

Men. Cit. You shall have it again without fail.

Mul. 'Tis best for you that I have: otherwise think not to roost within these doors again.

Pen. Hark ye, what say ye to me now, for bringing these matters to your knowledge?
UXOR RESCIVIT

Pe. id quidem edepol numquam erit, nam nihil est quod perdam domi. cum uiro cum uxore, di uos perdant! properabo ad forum, nam ex hac familia me plane excidisse intellego.—

Men. male mi uxor sese fecisse censet, quam exclusit foras; quasi non habeam quo intromittar alium meliorem locum. si tibi displiceo, patiundum: at placuero huic Erotio, quae me non excludet ab se, sed apud se occludet domi. nunc ibo, orabo ut mihi pallam reddat quam dudum dedi; aliam illi redimam meliorem. heus! ecquis hic est ianitor? aperite atque Erotium aliquis euocate ante ostium.

Scaena III

Erotium. Menaechmus I.

Er. Quis hic me quaerit? Men. sibi inimicus magi quam aetati tuae. Er. mi Menaechme, quer ante aedis astas? sequere intro. Men. mane. scin quid est quod ego ad te uenio? Er. scio, ut tibi ex me sit uolup. Men. immo edepol pallam illam, amabo te, quam tibi dudum dedi, mihi eam redde. uxor rescuuit rem omnem, ut factum est, [5 ordine. ego tibi redimam bis tanta pluris pallam quam uoles, Mul. I say, when thou hast anything stolen from thee, come to me, and I will help thee to seek it. And so, farewell. [Exit.]

Pen. God a mercy for nothing: that can never be, for I have nothing in the world worth the stealing. So now with husband, wife, and all, I am clean out of favour. A mischief on ye all. [Exit.]

Men. Cit. My wife thinks she is notably revenged on me, now she shuts me out of doors, as though I had not a better place to be welcome to. If she shut me out, I know who will shut me in. Now will I entreat Erotium to let me have the cloak again to stop my wife's mouth withal; and then will I provide a better for her. Ho! who is within there? Somebody tell Erotium I must speak with her.

Scene III

Enter Erotium.

Erot. Who calls?

Men. Cit. Your friend more than his own.

Men. Cit. Tarry, I must speak with ye here.

Erot. Say your mind.

Men. Cit. Wot ye what? my wife knows all the matter now, and my coming is, to request you that I may have again the cloak which I brought you, that so I may appease her: and I promise you, I'll give ye another worth two of it.
Er. tibi dedi equidem illam, ad phrygionem ut ferres, paullo prius, et illud spinter, ut ad auruficem ferres, ut fieret nouom.
Men. mihi tu ut dederis pallam et spinter? numquam factum reperies.
nam ego quidem postquam illam dudum tibi dedi, atque 10
abii ad forum:
nunc redeo, nunc te postillac uideo.  Er. uideo quam rem agis.
quia commisi, ut me defrudes, ad eam rem adfectas uiam.
Men. neque edepol te defrudandi caussa posco (quin tibi dico uxorem rescuisses)—Er. nec te ulro oraii ut dares:
tute ulro ad me detulisti, dedisti eam dono mihi;
eandem nunc reposcis: patiar. tibi habe, aufer, utere uel tu uel tua uxor, uel etiam in loculos compingite.
tu hac post hunc diem pedem intro non feres, ne frustra sis;
quando tu me bene merentem tibi habes despicatui, nisi feres argentum, frustra me ductare non potes. 15
aliam posthac inuenito quam habeas frustratui.—
Men. nimis iracunde hercle tandem. heús tu, tibi dico, mane, redi. etiamne astas? etiam audes mea reuorti gratia?
abiit intro, occlusit aedis. nunc ego sum exclusissumus:
neque domi neque apud amicam mihi iam quicquam creditur. 25
ibo et consulam hanc rem amicos quid faciendum censeant.—
Erot. Why, I gave it you to carry to your dyers; and my chain likewise, to have it altered.

Men. Cit. Gave me the cloak and your chain? In truth I never saw ye since I left it here with you, and so went to the Sessions, from whence I am but now returned.

Erot. Ah then, sir, I see you wrought a device to defraud me of them both. Did I therefore put ye in trust? Well, well.

Men. Cit. To defraud ye? No: but I say, my wife hath intelligence of the matter.

Erot. Why, sir, I asked them not; ye brought them of your own free motion. Now ye require them again, take them, make sops of them, you and your wife together. Think ye I esteem them or you either? Go; come to me again when I send for you.

Men. Cit. What! so angry with me, sweet Erotium? Stay, I pray stay.

* Erot. Stay? Faith, sir, no: think ye I will stay at your request?

Men. Cit. What, gone in chafing, and clapped to the doors? now I am every way shut out for a very bench-whistler: neither shall I have entertainment here nor at home. I were best go try some other friends, and ask counsel what to do.

ACT V

Scene I

Enter Menechmus the Traveler, Mulier.

Men. Tra. Most foolishly was I overseen in giving my purse and money to Messenio, whom I can nowhere find. I fear he is fallen into some lewd company.

Mul. I marvel that my husband comes not yet; but see where he is now, and brings my cloak with him.

Men. Tra. I muse where the knave should be.

Mul. I will go ring a peal through both his ears for this dishonest behaviour. Oh, sir, ye are welcome home with your thievery on your shoulders. Are ye not ashamed to let all the world see and speak of your lewdness?

Men. Tra. How now? what lacks this woman?

Mul. Impudent beast, stand ye to question about it? For shame hold thy peace.

Men. Tra. What offence have I done, woman, that I should not speak to you?

Mul. Askest thou what offence? O shameless boldness!

Men. Tra. Good woman, did ye never hear why the Grecians termed Hecuba to be a bitch?

Mul. Never.

Men. Tra. Because she did as you do now; on whomsoever she met withall, she railed, and therefore well deserved that dogged name.

Mul. These foul abuses and contumelies I can never endure; nay, rather will I live a widow's life to my dying day.

Men. Tra. What care I whether thou livest as a widow, or as a wife? This passeth, that I meet with none, but thus they vex me with strange speeches.

quam istaec flagitia tua pati quae tu facis.

Men. quid id ad me, tu te nuptam possis perpeti an sis abitura a tuo uiro? an mos hic ita est peregrino ut aduenienti narrent fabulas?

Ma. quas fabulas? non, inquam, patiar praeterhac, quin uidua uiuam quam tuos móres perferam.

Men. mea quidem hercle caussa uidua uiiuito uel usque dum regnum optinebit Iuppiter.

Ma. at mihi negabas dudum surrupuisse te, nunc eandem ante oculos adtines: non te pudet?

Men. eu hercle! mulier, multum et audax et mala's.
tun tibi hanc surruptam dicere audes quam mihi dedit alia mulier ut concinnandam darem?

Ma. ne istuc mecastor—iam patrem accersam meum atque ei narrabo tua flagitia quae facis.

i, Decio, quaere meum patrem, tecum simul
ut ueniat ad me: íta rem | esse dicitó.
iam ego aperiam istaec tua flagitia. Men. sanan es?
quae mea flagitia? Ma. pallam | atque aurum meum

Ma. si me derides, at pol illum non potes,

ART NOT ASHAMED?

Men. Tra. Prithee for my part, live a widow till the world's end, if thou wilt. 31

Mul. Even now thou denied'st that thou stolest it from me, and now thou bringest it home openly in my sight. Art not ashamed? 34

Men. Tra. Woman, you are greatly to blame to charge me with stealing of this cloak, which this day another gave me to carry to be trimmed.

Mul. Well, I will first complain to my father. Ho, boy, who is within there? Decio, go run quickly to my father; desire him of all love to come over quickly to my [40 house. I'll tell him first of your pranks; I hope he will not see me thus handled.

Men. Tra. What a God's name meaneth this mad woman thus to vex me? 44

Mul. I am mad because I tell ye of your vile actions and lewd pilfering away my apparel and my jewels, to carry to your filthy drabs.

Men. Tra. For whom this woman taketh me I know not. I know her as much as I know Hercules' wife's father. 50

Mul. Do ye not know me? That's well. I hope ye know my father: here he comes. Look, do ye know him?
nouistin tu illum?  Men. noui cum Calcha simul:
eodem die illum uidi quo te ante hunc diem.
Ma. negas nouisse me? negas patrem meum?
Men. idem hercle dicam si auom uis adducere.
Ma. ecastor pariter hoc atque alias res soles.

Mul. Dost know neither of us both, me nor my father?

Men. Tra. Faith, nor thy grandfather neither.

Mul. This is like the rest of your behaviour.

Scene II

Enter Senex.

* Sen. Though, bearing so great a burthen as old age, I can make no great haste, yet as I can, I will go to my daughter, who I know hath some earnest business with me, that she sends in such haste, not telling the cause why I should come. But I durst lay a wager, I can guess near the matter: I suppose it is some brabble between her husband and her. These young women that bring great dowries to their husbands, are so masterful and obstinate, that they will have their own wills in everything, and make men servants to their

Mul. Father, ye are welcome.

Sen. How now, daughter? What? is all well; why is your husband so sad? have ye bin chiding? tell me, which of you is in fault?

Mul. First, father, know, that I have not any way misbehaved myself; but the truth is, that I can by no means endure this bad man to die for it; and therefore desire you to take me home to you again.

Sen. What is the matter?

Mul. He makes me a stale and a laughing-stock to all the world.

Sen. Who doth?

Mul. This good husband here, to whom you married me.

Sen. See, see; how oft have I warned you of falling out with your husband?

Mul. I cannot avoid it, if he doth so foullly abuse me.

Sen. I always told ye, ye must bear with him, ye must let him alone; ye must not watch him, nor dog him, nor meddle with his courses in any sort.

Mul. He haunts naughty harlots under my nose.

Mul. There he feasts and banquets, and spends, and spoils.

Sen. Would ye have your husband serve ye as your drudge? Ye will not let him make merry, nor entertain his friends at home.

Mul. Father, will ye take his part in these abuses, and forsake me?

Sen. Not so, daughter; but if I see cause, I will as well tell him of his duty.

Men. Tra. [aside] I would I were gone from this prating father and daughter.

Sen. Hitherto I see not but he keeps ye well; ye want nothing; apparel, money, servants, meat, drink, all things necessary. I fear there is fault in you.

Mul. But he filcheth away my apparel and my jewels, to give to his trulls.

Sen. If he doth so, 'tis very ill done: if not, you do ill to say so.

Mul. You may believe me, father, for there you may see my cloak which now he hath fetched home again, and my chain which he stole from me.

Sen. Now will I go talk with him to know the truth. [To Men. Tra.] Tell me, Menechnus, how is it that I hear such disorder in your life? Why are ye so sad, man? wherein hath your wife offended you?

_Men. Tra._ Do I dwell in that house?

_Sen._ Dost thou deny it?

_Men. Tra._ I do.

_Sen._ Hark ye, daughter; are ye removed out of your house?

_Mul._ Father, he useth you as he doth me: this life I have with him.

_Sen._ Menechmus, I pray leave this fondness; ye jest too perversely with your friends.

_Men. Tra._ Good old father, what, I pray, have you to [75 do with me? or why should this woman thus trouble me, with whom I have no dealings in the world?

_Mul._ Father, mark, I pray, how his eyes sparkle: they roll in his head; his colour goes and comes; he looks wildly. See, see.

_Men. Tra. [aside]_ What? they say now I am mad: the best way for me is to feign myself mad indeed, so shall I be rid of them.

_Mul._ Look how he stares about, how he gapes!

Sen. Out upon him, Bedlam fool.

Men. Tra. Hark, Apollo commands me that I should rend out her eyes with a burning lamp.

Sen. Come not near me, sirrah.

Men. Yea, I will quarter him, and pull all the bones out of his flesh, and then will I barrel up his bowels.

Sen. Sure, I am sore afraid he will do some hurt.

Men. Tra. Many things thou commandest me, Apollo: wouldst thou have me harness up these wild horses, and then climb up into the chariot, and so over-ride this old stinking toothless lion? So now I am in the chariot, and I have hold on the reins: here is my whip. Hai! come, ye wild jades, make a hideous noise with your stamping: hai, I say: will ye not go?

Sen. What? doth he threaten me with his horses?

Men Tra. Hark! now Apollo bids me ride over him that stands there, and kill him. How now? who pulls me down from my chariot by the hairs of my head? Oh, shall I not fulfil Apollo's commandment?

Sen. See, see, what a sharp disease this is, and how well he was even now. I will fetch a physician straight, before he grow too far into this rage.

Men. Cit. Never in my life had I more overthwart fortune in one day, and all by the villainy of this false knave the Parasite, my Ulysses that works such mischiefs against me his king. _Med._ I'll tell ye, he shall be brought over to my house, and there I will cure him.

_Sen._ Is that best?

_Med._ What else? There I can order him as I list.

_Sen._ Well, it shall be so.

_Med._ Oh, sir, I will make you take neesing powder this twenty days.

_Men. Cit._ I'll beat ye first with a bastinado this thirty days.

_Med._ Fetch men to carry him to my house.

_Sen._ How many will serve the turn?

_Med._ Being no madder than he is now, four will serve.

_Sen._ I'll fetch them. Stay you with him, Master Doctor.

_Med._ No, by my faith: I'll go home to make ready all things needful. Let your men bring him hither.

_Sen._ I go.

_Exeunt [Sen. and Med.]._

_Men. Cit._ Are they both gone? Good gods, what meaneth this? These men say I am mad, who without doubt are mad themselves. I stir not, I fight not, I am not sick. I speak to them, I know them. Well, what were I now best to do? I would go home, but my wife shuts me forth a doors. Erotium is far out with me too. Even here I will rest me till the evening: I hope by that time, they will take pity on me. [Seats himself apart.]

THE GOOD SERVANT

Scene VI

Enter Messenio, the Traveller's servant, [and another servant].

* Mess. The proof of a good servant, is to regard his master's business as well in his absence as in his presence; and I think him a very fool that is not careful as well for his ribs and shoulders, as for his belly and throat. When I think upon the rewards of a sluggard, I am ever pricked with a careful regard of my back and shoulders; for in truth I have no fancy to these blows, as many a one hath. Methinks it is propterea eri imperium exsequor, bene et sedate seruo id; atque id mihi prodest.

alii sei ita ut in rem esse ducunt sint, ego ita ero ut me esse oportet; metum id mihi adhibeam, culpam apstineám, ero ut omnibus in locis sim praesto:

serui qui quom culpa carent metuont i solent esse eris utibiles.

nam illi qui nil metuont, postquam malum †promeri- [20 tumque† ei metuont.

metuam hau multum. prope est quando †ceruso †faciam† pretium exsolutet.

〈eo〉 ego exemplo seruo, tergo ut in rem esse arbitror.

postquam in tabernam uassa et seruos conlocaui, ut iusserat, ita uenio aduorsum. nunc fores pultabo, adesse ut me sciat, †neque utrum† ex hoc saltu damni saluom ut educam foras.

sed metuo ne sero ueniam depugnato proelio.

Scaena VII

Sr. Per ego uobis deos atque homines dico ut imperium meum sapienter habeatis curae, quae ímperauí atque impero:

facite illic homo iam in medicinam ablatus sublimen siet, nisi quidem uos uostra crura aut latera nihil penditis.

caue quisquam quod illíc minitetur uostrum flocci fecerit.
no pleasure to a man to be basted with a rope's end two or three hours together. I have provided yonder in the town for all our mariners, and safely bestowed all my master's trunks and fardels; and am now coming to see if he be yet got forth of this dangerous gulf, where I fear me he is overplunged. Pray God he be not overwhelmed and past help ere I come.

Scene VII

Enter Senex, with four Lorarii, Porters.

Sen. Before gods and men, I charge and command you, sirs, to execute with great care that which I appoint you: if ye love the safety of your own ribs and shoulders, then go take me up my son-in-law, lay all hands upon him: why quid statis? quid dubitatis? iam sublimen raptum oportuit.
ego ibo ad medicum: praesto ero illi, quam uenietis.

Men. occidi!

quid uoltis uos? quid quae ueritas? quid me circumsistitis?
quo rapitis me? quo fertis me? perii, opsecro uostram fidem,

Epidamnienses, subuenite, ciues! quin me mittitis?

Mes. pro di inmortales! opsecro, quid ego oculis aspicio meis?
erum meum indignissume nescioqui sublimen ferunt.

Men. ecquis suppetias mi audet ferre? Mes. égo, cre, aúdacissuime.
o facinus indignum et malum, Epidamnii ciues, erum meum hic in pacato oppido luci deripier in uia, qui liber ad uos uenerit!

mittite istunc. Men. opsecro te, quisquis es, operam mihi ut des neu sinas in me insignite fieri tantam iniuriam.

Mes. immo et operam dabo et defendam et subuenibo sedulo. numquam te pater perire, me perirest aequius.
eripe oculum istic, ab umero qui tenet, ere, te opsecro.

hisce ego iam sementem in ore faciam pugnosque opseram.

maxumo hodie malo hercle uostró istunc fertis. mittite.

Men. teneo ego huic oculum. Mes. face ut oculi locus in capite apparent.
HELP, HELP!

stand ye still? what do ye doubt? I say, care not for his [5 threatenings, nor for any of his words. Take him up, and bring him to the Physician's house: I will go thither before.

Exit. [The Porters sieze Men.]

Mess. O Jupiter, what do I see? my master abused by a company of varlets.

Men. Cit. Is there no good man will help me?

Mess. Help ye, master? yes, the villains shall have my life before they shall thus wrong ye. 'Tis more fit, I should [15 be killed, than you thus handled. Pull out that rascal's eye that holds ye about the neck there. I'll clout these peasants; out, ye rogue; let go, ye varlet.

Men. Cit. I have hold of this villain's eye.

Mess. Pull it out, and let the place appear in his head. Away ye cut-throat thieves, ye murtherers.
uos scelesti, uos rapaces, uos praedones! Lo. periimus! opsecro hercle! Mes. mittite ergo. Men. quid me uobis tactiost?

pecte pugnis. Mes. agite abite, fugite hinc in malam crucem em tibi etiam! quia postremus cedis, hoc praemi feres. nimi' bene ora commetaui atque ex mea sententia. 30 edepol, ere, ne tibi suppetias temperi adueni modo. Men. at tibi di semper, adulescens, quisquis es, faciant bene. nam apsque ted ésset, hodie numquam ad solem occasum uiuerem.

Mes. salue, mi patrone. 'quom tu liber es, Messenio, gaudeo.' credo hercle uobis. sed, patrone, te opsecro, ne minus imperes mihi quam quam tuos seruos fui. apud ted habitabo et quando ibis, una tecum ibo domum. 45
Lo. Omnes. Oh, oh, ay! [Cry pitifully.]

Mess. Away, get ye hence, ye mongrels, ye dogs. Will ye be gone? Thou rascal behind there, I'll give thee somewhat more, take that. [Exeunt Lorarii.] It was time to come, master; you had been in good case, if I had not been here now. I told you what would come of it.

Men. Cit. Now as the gods love me, my good friend, I thank thee: thou hast done that for me which I shall never be able to requite.

Mess. I'll tell ye how, sir; give me my freedom.

Men. Cit. Should I give it thee?

Mess. Seeing you cannot requite my good turn.

Men. Cit. Thou art deceived, man.

Mess. Wherein?

Men. Cit. On mine honesty, I am none of thy master; I had never yet any servant would do so much for me.

Mess. Why then bid me be free: will you?

Men. Cit. Yea, surely: be free, for my part.

Mess. Oh, sweetly spoken; thanks, my good master. Servus alius. Messenio, we are all glad of your good fortune.

Mess. Oh, master, I'll call ye master still. I pray use me in any service as ye did before. I'll dwell with you still; and when ye go home, I'll wait upon you.

Men. Cit. Nay, nay, it shall not need.
NIMIA MIRA

Men. minime. Mes. nunc ibo in tabernam, uassa atque argentum tibi referam. recte est opsignatum in uidulo marsuppium cum uiatico: id tibi iam huc adferam. Men. adfer strenue. Mes. saluom tibi ita ut mihi dedisti reddibo. hic me mane.— Men. nimia mira mihi quidem hodie exorta sunt miris modis: 50 alii me negant eum esse qui sum atque excludunt foras; etiam hic seruom se meum esse aiebat quem ego emisi manu, [uel ille qui se petere argentum modo, qui seruom se meum esse aiebat, (med erum suom), quem ego modo emisi manu] is ait se mihi adlaturum cum argento marsuppium: 55 id si attulerit, dicam ut a me ábeat liber quo uolet, ne tum, quando sanus factus sit, a me argentum petat. socer et medicus me insanire aiebant. quid sit mira sunt. haec nihilo esse mihi uidentur setius quam somnia. nunc ibo intro ad hanc meretricem, quamquam suspenset [60 mihi, si possum exorare ut pallam reddat quam referam domum.—

SCAENA VIII

MENAECMVS II. MESSENIO.

Men. Men hodie usquam conuenisse te,audax, audes dicere, postquam aduorsum mi imperaui ut huc ueniros? Mes. quin modo erupui, homines qui ferebant te sublimen quattuor,
PERPLEXITIES

Mess. I’ll go straight to the Inn, and deliver up my accounts, and all your stuff. Your purse is locked up safely sealed in the casket, as you gave it me. I will go fetch it to you.

Men. Cit. Do, fetch it.

Mess. I will.

[Exit.]

Men. Cit. I was never thus perplexed. Some deny me to be him that I am, and shut me out of their doors. This fellow saith he is my bondman, and of me he begs his freedom: he will fetch my purse and money. Well, if he bring it, I will receive it, and set him free. I would he would so go his way. My old father-in-law and the doctor say I am mad. Whoever saw such strange demeanours? Well, though Erotium be never so angry, yet once again I’ll go see if by entreaty I can get the cloak on her to carry to my wife.

Exit.

Scene VIII

Enter Menechmus the Traveller, and Messenio.

Men. Tra. Impudent knave, wilt thou say that I ever saw thee since I sent thee away to-day, and bade thee come for me after dinner?

Mess. Ye make me stark mad: I took ye away, and rescued ye from four great big-boned villains, that were apud hasce aedis. tu clamabas deum fidem atque hominum omnium, quom ego accurro teque eripio ui, pugnando, ingratiis. ob eam rem, quia te seruaui, me amisisti liberum.
quom argentum dixi me petere et uasa, tu quantum potest praecucurristi obuiam, ut quae fecisti inftias eas.

Men. liberum ego te iussi abire? Mes. certo. Men. quin certissumumst mepte potius fieri seruom quam te umquam emittam manu. 10

Menaechmus I. Messenio.

Menaechmus II.

Men.\(^1\) o adulescens, salue, qui me seruausti, quisquis es. Mes. adulescens, quaeso hercle eloquere tuom mihi nomen, nisi piget

Men.\(^1\) non edepol ita promeruisti de me ut pigeat quae uelis carrying ye away even here in this place. Here they had ye up; you cried Help, help! I came running to you: you and I together beat them away by main force. Then for my good turn and faithful service, ye gave me my freedom: I told ye I would go fetch your casket: now in the meantime you ran some other way to get before me, and so you deny it all again.

Men. Tra. I gave thee thy freedom?

Mess. You did.

Men. Tra. When I give thee thy freedom, I’ll be a bondman myself; go thy ways.

Mess. Whew, marry, I thank you for nothing.

Enter Menechmus the Citizen, [talking back to Erotium and her maid within].

Men. Cit. Forsworn queans, swear till your hearts ache, and your eyes fall out, ye shall never make me believe that I carried hence either cloak or chain.

Mess. Oh, heavens, master, what do I see?

Men. Tra. What?

Mess. Your ghost.

Men. Tra. What ghost?

Mess. Your image, as like you as can be possible.

Men. Tra. [looking at Men. Cit.] Surely not much unlike me, as I think.

Men. Cit. O my good friend and helper, well met: thanks for thy late good help.

Mess. Sir, may I crave to know your name?

Men. Cit. I were to blame if I should not tell thee anything; my name is Menechmus.

Men. Tra. Nay, my friend, that is my name.

Men. Cit. I am of Syracusis in Sicilia.

Men. Tra. So am I.

Mess. Are you a Syracusan?

Men. Cit. I am.

Mess. Oho, I know ye: this is my master: I thought he there had been my master, and was proffering my service to him. Pray pardon me, sir, if I said anything I should not.

Men. Tra. Why, doting patch, didst thou not come with me this morning from the ship?

Mess. My faith, he says true. This is my master, you may go look ye a man. God save ye, master: you sir, farewell. This is Menechmus.

Men. Cit. I say, that I am Menechmus.

Mess. What a jest is this? Are you Menechmus?

Men. Cit. Even Menechmus, the son of Moschus.

Men. Tra. My father's son?

Men. Cit. Friend, I go about neither to take your father nor your country from you.

Mess. [aside] Oh, immortal gods, let it fall out as I hope; and for my life these two are the two twins, all things agree to jump together. I will speak to my master. Menechmus.

Both. What wilt thou?

Mess. I call you not both: but which of you came with me from the ship?
Men. at ego. Mes. te uolo igitur. huc concede. Men.\(^2\) concessi. quid est

Mes. illic hōmo aut sycophanta aut geminus est frater tuos. nam ego hominem hominis similiorem numquam uidi alterum. neque aqua aquae nec lacte est lactis, crede mi, usquam [30 similius quam hic tui est, tuque huius autem; poste eandem patriam ac patrem memorat. meliust nos adire átque hunc percontarier.

Men.\(^2\) hercle qui tu me admonuisti recte et habeo gratiam. perge operam dare, opsecro hercle; liber esto, si inuenis hunc meum fratrem esse. Mes. spero. Men.\(^2\) et ego [35 idem spero fore.

Mes. quid ais tu? Menaechmum, opinor, te uocari dixeras.

Men.\(^1\) ita uero. Mes. huic item Menaechmo nomen est. in Sicilia te Syracusis natum esse dixisti: hic natust ibi.

Moschum tibi patrem fuisse dixti: huic itidem fuit.
nunc operam potestis ambo mihi dare et uobis simul. 40

Men.\(^1\) promeruisti ut ne quid ores quod uelis quin impetres. tam quasi me emeris argento, liber seruibo tibi.

Mes. spes mihi est uos inuenturum fratres germanos duos geminos, una matre natos et patre uno uno die. 44

Men.\(^1\) mira memoras. utinam ecficere quod pollicitu’s possies.

Mes. possum. sed nunc agite uterque id quod rogabo ditice.

Men.\(^1\) ubi lubet, roga: répondebo. nil reticebo quod sciam, Men. Cit. Not I.
Men. Tra. I did.
Mess. Then I call you. Come hither.
Men. Tra. What's the matter?
Mess. [aside to Men. Tra.] This same is either some notable cozening juggler, or else it is your brother whom we seek. I never saw one man so like another: water to water, nor milk to milk, is not liker than he is to you.
Men. Tra. [aside to Mess.] Indeed I think thou sayest true. Find it that he is my brother, and I here promise thee thy freedom.
Mess. [aside to Men. Tra.] Well, let me about it. [To Men. Cit.] Hear ye, sir; you say your name is Menechmus.
Men. Cit. I do.
Mess. So is this man's. You are of Syracuse?
Men. Cit. True.
Mess. So is he. Moschus was your father?
Men. Cit. He was.
Mess. So was he his. What will you say, if I find that ye are brethren and twins?
Men. Cit. I would think it happy news.
Mess. Nay stay, masters both: I mean to have the honour of this exploit. Answer me: your name is Menechmus?
Mes. est tibi nomen Menaechmo?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} fateor.
Mes. est itidem tibi?

Men.\textsuperscript{2} est.
Mes. patrem fuisset Moschum tibi ais?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} ita uero.
Men.\textsuperscript{2} et mihi.

Mes. esne tu Syracusanus?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} certo.
Mes. quid tu?
Men.\textsuperscript{2} quippini?

Mes. optume usque adhuc conueniunt signa.
porro operam date.

quid longissume meministi, dic mihi, in patria tua?

Men.\textsuperscript{1} cum patre ut abii Tarentum ad mercatum, postea inter homines me deerrare a patre atque inde auehi.

Men.\textsuperscript{2} Iuppiter supreme, serua me!
Mes. quid clamas?
quin taces?

quot eras annos gnatus quam te pater a patria | auehit?

Men.\textsuperscript{1} septuennis: nam tunc dentes mihi cadebant primulum.
neque patrem numquam postilla uidi.
Mes. quid?
uos tum patri filii quot eratis?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} ut nunc maxume memini, duo.

Mes. uter eratis, tun an ille, maior?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} aeque ambo pares.

Mes. qui id potest?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} geminei ambo eramus.
Men.\textsuperscript{2} di me seruatum uolunt.

Mes. si interpellas, ego tacebo.
Men.\textsuperscript{2} potius taceo.
Mes. dic mihi:

uno nomine ambo eratis?
Men.\textsuperscript{1} minime. nam mihi hoc erat, quod nunc est, Menaechmo: illum tum uocabant Sosiclem.

Men.\textsuperscript{2} signa adgnoui, contineri quin complectar non queo.
65
BROTHER, LET ME EMBRACE THEE

Mess. And yours?
Men. Tra. And mine.
Mess. You are of Syracuse?
Men Cit. I am.
Men. Tra. And I.
Mess. Well, this goeth right thus far. What is the farthest thing that you remember there?

Men. Cit. How I went with my father to Tarentum, to a great mart, and there in the press I was stolen from him.

Men. Tra. O Jupiter!
Mess. [to Men. Tra.] Peace, what exclaiming is this?
[To Men. Cit.] How old were ye then?

Men. Cit. About seven year old: for even then I shed teeth, and since that time I never heard of any of my kindred.

Mess. Had ye never a brother?
Men. Cit. Yes, as I remember, I heard them say, we were two twins.

Men. Tra. Oh, Fortune!
Mess. Tush, can ye not be quiet? Were ye both of one name?

Men. Cit. Nay, as I think, they called my brother, Sosicles.

Men. Tra. It is he. What need further proof? Oh, brother, brother, let me embrace thee!
mi germanæ, gemine frater, salue. ego sum Sosicles.

Men.\(^1\) quo modo igitur post Menaechmo nomen est factum tibi?

Men.\(^2\) postquam ad nos renuntiatum est te * * * * * * * * * et patrem esse mortuom, auo' noster mutuit: quod tibi nomen est, fecit mihi.  70

Men.\(^1\) credo ita esse factum ut dicis. sed mihi noc réponde.

Men.\(^2\) roga.

Men.\(^1\) quid erat nomen nostrae matri? Men.\(^2\) Teuximarchac.

Men.\(^1\) conuenit.

o salue, insperate, annis multis post quem conspicor.

Men.\(^2\) frater, et tu, quém ego multeis miserieis, laboribus usque adhuc quaesui quemque ego esse inuentum gaudeo.  75

Mes. hoc erat quod haec te meretrix huius uocabat nonnine: hunc censebat te esse, credo, quom uocat te ad prandium.

Men.\(^1\) namque edepol iussi hic mihi hodie prandium appararier, clam mean uxorem, quoi pallam surrupui dudum domo, eam dedi huic. Men.\(^2\) hanc, dicis, frater, pallam quam ego [80 habeo? Men.\(^1\) (haec east).

quo modo haec ad te peruenit? Men.\(^1\) meretrix huc ad prandium me abduxit, me sibi dedisse aiebat. prandi pertbene potaui atque accubui scortum, pallam et aurum hoc (apstuli).

Men.\(^1\) gaudeo edepol si quid propter me tibi euenit boni. nam illa quom te ad se uocabat, memet esse credidit.  85

Mes. numquid me morare quin ego liber, ut iusti, siem?
Men. Cit. Sir, if this be true, I am wonderfully glad: but how is it that ye are called Menechmus?

Men. Tra. When it was told us that you and our father were both dead, our grandsire, in memory of my father's name, changed mine to Menechmus.

Men. Cit. 'Tis very like he would do so indeed. But let me ask ye one question more: what was our mother's name?

Men. Tra. Theusimarche.

Men. Cit. Brother, the most welcome man to me, that the world holdeth!

Men. Tra. I joy, and ten thousand joys the more, having taken so long travel and huge pains to seek you.

Mess. See now, how all this matter comes about. Thus it was that the gentlewoman had ye in to dinner, thinking it had been he.

Men. Cit. True it is I willed a dinner to be provided for me here this morning; and I also brought hither closely a cloak of my wife's, and gave it to this woman.

Men. Tra. Is not this the same, brother?

Men. Cit. How came you by this?

Men. Tra. This woman met me; had me in to dinner; entertained me most kindly; and gave me this cloak, and this chain.

Men. Cit. Indeed she took ye for me: and I believe I have been as strangely handled by occasion of your coming.

Mess. You shall have time enough to laugh at all these matters hereafter. Do ye remember, master, what ye promised me?
Men. optumum atque aequisuum orat, frater: far caussa mea.

uexi—uxor quoque etiam, si quis empor uenerit. uix credo tota auctione capiet quinquagesies.

nunc, spectatores, ualete et nobis clare plaudite. 100

FINIS
Men. Cit. Brother, I will entreat you to perform your promise to Messenio: he is worthy of it.

Men. Tra. I am content.

Mess. Io Triumphe!

Men. Tra. Brother, will ye now go with me to Syracuse?

Men. Cit. So soon as I can sell away such goods as I possess here in Epidamnum, I will go with you.

Men. Tra. Thanks, my good brother.

Men. Cit. Messenio, play thou the crier for me, and make a proclamation.

Mess. A fit office. Come on. Oh yes!

What day shall your sale be?

Men. Cit. This day sennight.

Mess. [cries] All men, women and children in Epidamnum, or elsewhere, that will repair to Menechmus’ house this day sennight, shall there find all manner of things to sell; servants, household stuff, house, ground and all; so they bring ready money. Will ye sell your wife too, sir?

Men. Cit. Yea, but I think nobody will bid money for her.

Mess. Thus, gentlemen, we take our leaves, and if we have pleased, we require a Plaudite.

NOTES

p. 22, l. 49. 'Nay, further yet with a will from the lion's cave.'

'Good for ye! 'tis pity ye were not made a charioteer to drive in a race,' who had to look behind for fear of a foul from his competitors.

p. 24, l. 1. 'I don't count you.' 'Then I am in the same case as the adscriptivi,' who were enrolled as reserves to fill the places of the killed: not on the strength of the regiment. Until a soldier was in numeris, he was not officially miles.

Below, the translator takes tua est legio as 'the legion is under your command.' Is it possible that legio is used in its original sense of choice?

'Drink for the heavens' I do not understand. The old texts read pro Ilio: perhaps the translator had caelo somewhere in his copy. He paraphrases freely here, however.

p. 26, l. 17. 'garter': girdle.

p. 26, l. 20. 'Thus . . . lovers' probably belongs to Erotium; the next line to P. (aside).

'mary-bone': marrow-bone.

p. 27, l. 42. 'lese': lose.

p. 28, l. 3. M. says really that he would feel happier to see his own country again.

p. 32, l. 44 omitted in trans.; the author here compresses.

p. 32, ll. 7, 8 are run into one by the old texts. The Ambr. shows that there were two: they seem to have run thus:

Men. Tra. A good day to you, whoever you are.

Cyl. Whoever I am! What I don't you know who I am?

Men. Tra. Not I, i' faith.

Cylindrus then continues: Where are the other guests?

The first word of l. 8 is certainly non, not noui, as Fleckelson conjectured.
NOTES

The translation ‘no, not I’ must be taken ironically. Below, ll. 12-13 are omitted; the Ambr. shows another lost line.

p. 33, l. 34. ‘catchpoles, cony-catchers’: constables, cheats.

p. 34, l. 22. Culindrus should be read here, with a pun on culleus (leather bag); Coriendrus, a pun on corium (leather).

p. 36, l. 36. hicquidem: he said I was mad, now I see he is so.

p. 36, l. 51. ‘Well, I’ll go and see about dressing the meat.’

p. 36, ll. 53-58 compressed.

p. 38, 1 ff. The speech is compressed; this is so often done that it will not be noted after this except for some special reason.

p. 45, l. 63. ‘Pythia’ should be Phintia.

(This succession is not in the history.)

p. 47, l. 84. ‘dyers’: worker in gold embroidery.

p. 47, l. 94. ‘sot’: fool.

p. 49, l. 95. ‘Ay, master’: there is nothing of this in the Latin perii, ‘I’m done for.”

p. 48, l. 1. Twenty: thirty.

p. 53, l. 39. Pediculus: the pun is not in the Latin, from which the trans. here departs.

p. 54. Ancilla means Maid: it is not a proper name.

Act IV. Mulier: woman.

p. 60, ll. 19-21 are omitted.

p. 79. Senex: old man.

p. 82, ll. 51-2 are omitted, and the speech of Men. aside inserted.

The last speech of Men. Tra. comes after the first speech of Sen.; the translator has compressed it.

p. 105, l. 41. Servus alicius: another slave. He is not in the original caste.

p. 109, l. 17. ‘Whew . . .’: not in text.

p. 113, l. 70. This quick dialogue is a paraphrase of a longer speech of Messenio.

p. 119, l. 157. Plaudite: please applaud. This was the actors’ appeal at the end of a play.
